THE INTELLIGENCER.

WHEELING, NOVEMBER 25, 1899.

Coming Session of Congress.

There can be no question about the supreme importance of the coming session of Congress, which convenes on Monday week. The presidential elections take place next year, and what-ever legislation is enacted will have an influence, good or bad, on the contest between the two great parties. Colonel David B. Henderson, who, it is ac-knowledged, will be the speaker of the next house of representatives, is already in Washington holding a court of his own, receiving the importunate calls of such congressmen as are in the city, who are presenting their claims for committee placement. One of the happiest omens is the fact that the next speaker, Col. Henderson, will be in thorough accord with President McKinley and in sympathy with all of the policies of the administration. This means more than appears on the sur-

Perhaps the most important subject that will receive immediate attention is the currency question. When the Republican caucus which appointed the monetary committee was held last February Mr. Payne, of New York, pro-posed that whatever measure was agreed upon should be reported to the first Republican caucus of the next Congress and without the formality of a reference to the committee on banking and currency the bill should brought up in the house for immediate consideration. This could be accomplished by a resolution from the committee on rules. This plan is understood to have the support of every member of the committee which has formulated a currency measure.

This emphasis of the gold standard will do much to clear the financial sky of any future uncertainties, and the sooner Congress sets the statute seal upon it the more secure will be the confidence in the Republican party which now prevails. In any event the country may rest assured that the Republican party will meet all the responsibilities that confront it, and will act promptly, performing its duty as it sees it. In doing these things it need not fear that the people will not endorse it, as they always have done so in the critical stages of the Nation's history. It is the only party so far that has proved to be the safest conserver of the country's destiny.

The Tariff Must Stand.

While the Intelligencer gives credit to the sound money policy of the Republican party as one of the chief factors that brought about the present prosperous conditions of the country in the matter of giving confidence to capital which had so long been vestment, the Dingley tariff must be credited with its share in exciting the remarkable industrial activity that obthroughout the length and breadth of the land. Under its beneficent influences our manufacturers have been enabled to invade foreign markets, compelling the countries of the old world to acknowledge the superiority of the American artisan and confess his incomparable genius. To preserve all these benefits there must be no retracing of steps at the behest of free traders, whose theories are beautiful on paper but disastrous in practice. The protective tariff must be maintained and the Republican party is the only safe custodian of its integrity.

In his testimony before the industrial commission the other day, Mr. John W. Gates, manager and director of the American Steel and Wire Company, stated that the protective tariff had everything to do with the growth of that industry, and that the continuance of the policy was necessary to its further progress and prosperity. No one but the free trader seeks to question such statements as these. One of the recent sophistical arguments advanced by the free traders is, if the trade of this country has increased so that our merchants have invaded foreign markets and have been able to compete successfully with foreign manufacturers, is there any need to continue a protective tariff? While it is acknowledged that some institutions once protected by the tariff have grown to such proportions that they possibly could do without it, it would be well for the laboring man to bear in mind that it is the existence of the protective tariff, which enables him to receive so much better wages than his European competitor, and it is this sense of se-curity at home which enables the American manufacturer to meet competition abroad and still maintain this relative high standard of wages. To do away with the protective tariff would not only result in the stifling of grownot only result in the stifling of grow-technically the same though socially ing industries, but the reduction of different of it is to be in the classical workingman.

The Sorrows of the Foolish. It is a woeful fact that a large pro-portion of humanity becomes credulous to the degree of idlocy when a glittering balt is held out to them that in any way promises to give two dollars for one. And it is more wonderful that trust their money with persons who as these same people will unhesitatingly entire strangers to them. Were they asked to invest the same amounts in any legitimate enterprise whose promoters were well known to them as men of probity and honor they would hold off with suspicion and finally refuse to risk their money. A man by the name of Miller was arrested recently in Brooklyn for operating what was known as the Franklin Syndicate. The head of this alleged syndicate caught hundreds of gudgeon with his alluring bait of specious prom-ises. His circulars specified that he would return to those who would invest their money with him 10 per cent on their investment. He predicted these handsome profits upon successful ventures on the New York Stock Exchange, which his superior genius (?) enabled him to make so uniformly successful that he could pay to his customers the fixed profit of 10 per cent. men stock speculation is risky. Even the most experienced operators in Wall street tell those who invest with them that the business is hazardous, and they almost always restrain from giving advice.

The tendency is for the percentage of profit on investments to be steadily re duced, but here is a man who, it would appear, has found an El Dorado where stock speculations are always so suc cessful that an absolute profit of 10 per cent can be paid to operators.

It is said that this man has received so much money from the gullible pub lic that he had to build vaults under the house where he operates to acco modate the rolling in of the coins of the foolish. There are few swift roads to fortune, and even they are hedged with many thorns. Earnest, honest endea-vor has the infallible merit of safety since the law was given to man that he must earn his bread by the sweat

What Aided Prosperity.

The Republican party in its platform upon which William McKinley was elected President of the United States made this unequivocal declaration and pledge: "The Republican party is unreservedly for sound money. It caused the enactment of the law providing for the resumption of specie payments in 1879; since then every dollar has been as good as gold.

"We are unalterably opposed to every measure calculated to debase our currency or impair the credit of our country. We are, therefore, opposed to the free coinage of silver, except by international agreement with the leading commercial nations of the world, which we pledge ourselves to promote, and until such agreement can be obtained the existing gold standard must be preserved. All our silver and paper money must be maintained at parity with gold, and we favor all measures designed to maintain inviolably the obligations of the United States and all our money whether coin or paper, at the present standard, the standard of the most enlightened nations of the earth."

In the fact that this declaration was sustained by the people at the polls lies the chief cause of the very general prosperity that has followed. Business is more sensitive to disturbance of the basis of credits than to anything else, and the fact that this basis was settled in harmony with the financial views of the civilized world for at least four years without possibility of retrogression in that time gave the industry and commerce of the country a working basis that it has improved with won-and think-if he can-he would not with such every day frequency put his foot in it. The other day he emerged from the seclusion of a hunting preserve where he had been killing deer for the amusement the slaughter afforded him, to lift up his voice in criticism of Secretary Gage for offering to purchase $25,000,000 in bonds.

A Chronic Critic. If Mr. Bryan would stop sometime

His whining complaint is that the offer is inconsistent with the assertions of Republicans that there is money enough in the country, because, if that were true, there would be no need to buy bonds. Whereupon the Philadelphia Press says: "That is characteristic Bryan reasoning. That the purchase of bonds makes not the slightest difference in the amount of money in the country does not seem to have penetrated Bryan's intellect. There is more money is the treasury than there is any need of, and some of it is being paid out for bonds, so that the money can go into circulation and the government save $2 006,000 in interest. The trouble with Bryan is that he does not know what he is talking about. About $9,000,000 has already been paid out for bonds, and it looks as though the government will get all the bonds it will take. The effect on business has already been highly beneficial, showing the wisdom of the offer."

There is another point. How was it that during Cleveland's administration the government had to issue bonds to get enough money to keep the wheels of government whirring?Is it not better, looking at the question from a simple business standpoint, to be able to reduce one's obligations instead of borrowing and adding indebtedness?

Mr. Bryan would better take another hunt-and this time we advise him to try to tree some common sense, and endeaver to bring down some game worth

For Admiral Dewey's comfort we beg suggest to him the immortal truth of Shakespeare's lines: 'Be thou as pure as ice, as chaste as snow thou shalt not escape calumny." It might also be added that a very warm reception awaits all calumniators in the "near future."

Our peripatetle Mormon friend, Elide Whitaker, is still lingering in West Virginia on his "miss usual, he claims all the virtues are centered in the creed he is proclaiming and very generously allows all the vices to be the product of the teachings of the Christian religion. Would it be altogether profess to suggest that Elder Whitaker has another guess?

Wheeling enjoys the marked distinction of having received the only definite acceptance of all the invitations ten-dered Admiral Dewey. The visit of the Wheeling committee could not have been made at a more opportune time and the graciousness displayed by the admiral and his wife without doubt came from the innermost depths their hearts.

The formation of the West Virginia Colored Republican Association of the District of Columbia, was a commendable move on the part of that class of our citizens. Its objects should appeal to every voter of that race in promoting the welfare of the Republican party in this state as well as co-operating with the party in national affairs.

GEN. FUNSTON SPEAKS OUT.

Tells Exactly His Part in the Campaign, and Denies the Charge of Paid Mewspaper Advertising of Himself.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 24 .- A Star special from San Francisco says: Be-fore sailing for Manila to-day, General Frederick Funston took occasion to make definite denial of the truth of re cent stories regarding himself, Colonel Wilder S. Metcalf and Major Bishop, in which Lieut Callahan, a former office of the Twentieth Kansas and others of that regiment, are credited with charging these officers with many sins of commission and omission, including the charges against Metcalf and Bishop, of shooting defenseless Filipine

"But I am not through with this affair yet," added the general. I know my Pisoners.

"But I am not through with this affair yet," added the general. I know the charges against Metcalf and Bishop are despicable and malicious lies and I intend to prove them such."

General Funston, in his statement, touches on some of the incidents in the Philippine campaign which helped to make himself and staff famous.

"At no time at the battle of Guiguinto," says he, "did I lie down except once, and that for ten seconds under especially furlous fire from the enemy, Then I was careful to see that every other officer and man was under cover before I dropped. Hardy, Drysdale and Willey did swim the Marilac river and I never claimed credit for it.

"Callahan's statement as to the Rio Grande affair is absurd. White and Tremblin did swim the river and hitched the rope by which the raft was handled. I crossed with eight men first, and, in all forty-dwe men were taken over. We drove out 2,500 insurgents, using 200 rounds of ammunition to a man during the half hour's fighting. General MacArthur and General Wheaton were eye-witnesses to that affair. They were standing at a freight house five hundred yards away on the south bank of the river. It was upon their report of that affair that I was made a brigadier seneral.

"At Bagbag river, Lieut, Ball, myself and four enlisted men swam the river under a fierce fire and we took the entrenchments. General Wheaton saw that, and every man who took part in it was resommended for a medal of honor. I dely any one to prove that I ever used money or any other mens to influence any newspaperman to advertise me. I have never had one in my employ, either directly or indirectly. The newspaper correspondents in the Philippines were men of honesty and great personal courage and took as many risks as any soldier on the firing line. General MacArthur had great trouble in trying to keep them back. I regret exceedingly that this controversy should have come up but I do not see how I can keep silent under unjust accusations."
